Teaching Assistantships (TA), Research Assistantships (RA) and

Graduate Assistantships (GA) for the D.Sc. in IT Students:

The Computer and Information Sciences Department provides some Teaching Assistantships for the D.Sc. in IT students, who may serve as an instructor of a class. A MS degree in CS, IS and IT and some teaching experience may be required. The positions are limited each semester. Fall semester may have more openings than that of spring semester, since we may have more students graduating in the spring, the regular ending of an academic year. If you are interested, please write an email statement with your resume to the D.Sc. in IT program Director Dr. Chao Lu at clu@towson.edu. The deadlines are: December 12 for the spring semester, and May 12 for the fall semester.

Research Assistantships are provided by professors' research grants. Students who are interested in funded research need to talk with professors who have grants to find your opportunities. If you like to discuss your research interests, you may make an appointment with Dr. Chao Lu at clu@towson.edu. I will be very happy to talk with everyone.

Administrative Graduate Assistantships can be found on campus from other departments, colleges, and/or units of the university (Office of the Provost, Assessment, Student Life, International Students Office, etc.), or computer labs on campus, or external sites. You can find these opportunities yourself.
