The Maryland Center for Community Schools at Towson University, in collaboration with MD4CS, is excited to invite you to participate in our upcoming Peer to Peer Mentoring Program where we pair new community school coordinators with experienced ones. This initiative is designed to help those new to the work by offering one-to-one mentoring.

Peer to Peer Features

- Expert mentors who have a wealth of experience: Drawn from Baltimore City and Prince George's County, where community schools have existed the longest, mentors offer their advice and mentoring.
- Independent Development Plan: Mentees design their own goals for their work in consultation with a mentor to make sure they feel more confident in their work.
- Monthly meetings with a mentor: A full year of mentoring around from the six key practices of community schools.

- Master classes: Our mentors offer additional workshops in key areas to do a deeper dive for a broader group beyond the mentees, but for those who want to learn.
- Meetups: In person meetup possibilities from site visits to connection at our annual conference.
- Monthly Interactive Virtual Sessions: Mentors and mentees get additional assistance through monthly interactions with Center staff.
